Background

Introducing dual VET has changed the environment in secondary VET schools. Earlier, work-based learning components were fully dependent on the school's willingness to cooperate with companies. In dual VET, schools are obliged to accept in-company training based on an agreement between learners (parents) and a training company. This creates conditions for clarifying responsibility-sharing between school, company, and learners (parents).

Objectives

Newly developed in-service training offered to pedagogues in schools should help them better understand requirements resulting from introducing dual VET.

Description

To familiarise VET teachers and trainers with dual VET, short credit-awarding courses were designed within the 2013-15 ESF project Development of secondary VET. The subsequent 2016-20 ESF project Dual education and increasing attractiveness and quality of VET also focuses on in-service training via three accredited programmes. The project aimed to train 600 members of pedagogical staff in curriculum issues, 200 directors of schools and other leading staff concerning the new role of schools in dual VET, and 300 members of pedagogical staff in career guidance for students.

The 2012-16 VET for the labour market project, within the Swiss-Slovak cooperation programme, was extended to offer short credit awarding courses to VET school staff. Around EUR 850 000 were assigned to update the knowledge and skills of around 500 VET teachers and trainers from December 2016 to March 2017 in their respective fields: electrical engineering (more than a third), construction (around 25%), food-processing (around 25%), chemistry and hairdressing. Strong support for the implementation of the Slovak-type dual VET also comes from international chambers of commerce, in particular from the Slovak-German Chamber of Commerce and Industry.
