

Tutors' relational professionalism

Facilitating innovation in a formalist pedagogical culture

Description

---

The Italian education system is largely formalist, but a case study of a vocational education and training (VET) programme shows that personalised approaches can be introduced. Tutors work alongside teachers to provide support, and their relational professionalism advances a student-centred model. Their role involves creating tailored paths for students and providing adaptive support, transforming the curriculum into one relevant for life. The study highlights the importance of relational professionalism in facilitating innovation in formalist pedagogical cultures.

Written by Monica Mincu and Paolo Nardi

Countries

---

 Italy

Downloads

---

 Tutors' relational professionalism

EN

Related intervention approaches

---

Tailored learning pathways