	▼ Read more ∨ The duration of on-the-job training is a subject to regulations at different levels. Each Region may decide on the minimum and maximum duration (out of 19 Regions and 2 Autonomous Provinces, only a few Regions have actually done so). In addition, it can be further regulated by collective agreements. Examples: for the subtype "ITS Paths", the Lombardy Region considers 750 hours of on-the-job training and Emilia-Romagna Region, 720/800 hours. There is a distinction between work and training during in-company training. For the hours during the incompany training, the employee is paid a 10% salary (unless collective agreement provisions state otherwise).
Apprentice social insurance	Paid by: the employer and the apprentice. The apprentice pays 5.84% of taxable wage for social insurance and the employer pays between 3% and 10%, or pays no contribution if the company has 9 employees or fewer. Rights: health, pension, annual leave, social insurance, social care, insurance cover for accidents at work and occupational diseases, illness, disability and old age, maternity, family allowance, unemployment (ASPI, social insurance for employment, in order to get unemployment benefit in case of dismissal), paid leave (88 hours per year for companies with fewer than 15 employees, 104 hours per year for companies with more than 15 employees).
Additional support for apprentice	Apprentices do not receive any financial support from the government.
Financing on-the- job training	The costs of on-the job training, including the apprentices wages, are covered by employers.
