Local relevance and coordination

- Making provision relevant to local labour market context while still maintaining a nationally coherent system
- Balancing meeting student demand and labour market demand
- Allowing for local flexibility to support partnership development
Holistic and personalised approach

• Identifying the “right” pathway at the “right” time

• Providing wrap-around support, including post-placement support

• Using community, culture and family as assets
Working with local employers

• Focusing on both quantity and quality of placements
Integrating data and evidence

• Considering evaluation throughout the policy / programme cycle

• Incorporating student voice and qualitative data
